Unique book on complementary nursing care, written for professionals in palliative and terminal care. Nurses, physicians and other palliative care workers, aromatherapist, massage therapists and herbalists alike will find a wealth of well founded information on aromacare and the way some 30 essential oils and a small but well chosen range of base oils and other base substances can be used in end of life care. You will find a full chapter on simple but wholesome massage techniques and a chapter on aquacare, which allows you to offer patients the great benefits of warm compresses, washings, affusions and baths. Also a short chapter on possible implementation routes is incorporated. All other chapters will offer you comprehensive information on symptoms in palliative stages, such as pain, dyspnoea, nausea, itch, wound and mouth care, anxiety, depression, sleeplessness and spiritual issues. You will find background information on these symptoms and how complementary care can be of enormous value to the quality of life and dying. I am honoured to share my passion, expertise, skills and recipes with you to make aromacare and complementary interventions in palliative care as accessible as possible. I sincerely hope that you, with the assistance of this book may help to spread professional and well founded complementary nursing care across the globe to enhance wellbeing of patients and their loved ones in the last stages of life.

A Monumental Achievement

By Friederike Hoffmann

This book on Complementary Nursing is certainly one of its kind. Well written and clear, its over 400 pages abound with knowledge and detailed instructions. Written as a nursing textbook, it covers how to deliver massage, bath, aromatherapy in massage oils etc. in nursing, and particularly in hospice care and for the dying. What is most astounding is the wealth of information contained in this book. Aside from precise instructions on the use of essential oils, including preparation and dosing, Knapp-Hayes details care for respiration, pain, mobility, fever, brain-tumor related epilepsy, heart and circulation, care for mouth and digestion as well as the uro-genital area, measures to harmonize emotions, fatigue and sleep. She also covers questions of palliative sedation, and spirituality in the context of dying, as well as mourning. For anyone who has ever worked in nursing, this book is an incredible treasure box of wonderful practical ideas of alternative care, put to the test for a long time in The Netherlands. An exhaustive book on the tried and true, anyone who has ever cared for the dying could not think of a topic left undiscussed with the precision that Knapp-Hayes brings to her work. A must-read for all truly wanting to take care of the elderly and dying in a holistic sense!

This is a great book, very well written

By Sam

This is a great book, very well written, based on experience and research. It caught my attention since I started reading it, I can't stop reading! It has been very helpful in real life. If you are a Health Professional but you are not an Aromatherapist, you will benefit greatly from this book since the author provides a great base in order for you to build knowledge from. And if you are an Aromatherapist, like me, you will be thrilled with the Real Cases the author mentioned and you will be able to apply immediately what you read. I am truly thankful for the translation of this book in the English language. A must read!

An AMAZINGLY comprehensive introduction...

By anonymous

This recently translated book ships from the author, in the Netherlands. Designated a handbook for nurses and health professionals I think it has much to offer the serious aromatherapy student, especially any one dealing with end of life issues for a loved one. Madeleine has filled the book with research citations, but, more important, with examples of patients and treatments from her years of experience. She and her patients come alive in the pages.

This book an absolute must-have for every aromatherapy educator, every professional who deals with patients of families in end-of-life situations, and every individual hoping to help the caregivers of a senior loved one or hospice patient. The book is an inspiration! It truly covers so much more than "end of life" care, with formulas for safe dilution, lists of safe and unsafe oils for children of different ages. The author gives the best introduction to the use of various CO2 extracts than I have seen anywhere. It is becoming one of my 'go to' references.
