An excellent and entertaining book - I enjoyed it very much

This book can be purchased from the United States Air Force Museum bookstore in Dayton, Ohio. I found a copy there - that was actually autographed by Paul Tibbets himself!

A glimpse of real history told by a real man.

By Donald P. Pehta

I happened to meet Paul Tibbets at an air show in Florida, and bought his book. He was in his late 80's or early 90's at the time, but still vital and interesting.

His story of his life was fascinating. How he learned to love flying as a young boy while throwing the brand new "Baby Ruth" candy bars to beach crowds from an open cockpit bi-plane, to his leading a bomber battalion in Europe before being selected to head the B-29 squadron that would drop the bomb that ended World War II. One eye-opening fact the revisionists neglect to mention when they lament the dropping of the second bomb, after the Japanese refused to surrender after the first. Captured newspapers after the first bomb reported to the rest of Japan that there was an 'air strike' over Hiroshima, but that damage was light. Imagine that. The war lords were hoping we only had one nuclear device, and wanted to keep their subjects prepared to "slaughter the invaders". Believe it or not, Millions, maybe tens of millions of lives were saved.

A great read.

Great piece of history...

By Charlene

Flight of the Enola Gay is a story that every American should read. I think it should also be part of the literature classes in high school curriculum across our nation. This is the story of the bombing of Hiroshima through the eyes of the man who flew the plane, and his flight crew. I have always enjoyed non-fiction and this ranks among one of the best books I have ever read. It was my honor to meet Paul Tibbets and several of his crew at a flight breakfast in southern Iowa several years ago and get my book autographed before they were all deceased. The reader will not be able to put the book down, and will learn a lot of our United States WW II history in the process!
